Here are Tesla's current five largest shareholders (excluding Elon Musk) and how they voted in last year's ratification of Elon's 2018 pay package:

- Vanguard (holds $115B in \$TSLA): For
- BlackRock ($95B): For
- State Street ($52B): Against
- Fidelity/Geode Capital ($30B): For
- JPMorgan Chase ($21B): For

Unlike last year's ratification vote, Elon and Kimbal Musk can both participate in this year's 2025 CEO Performance Award plan vote due to Tesla's reincorporation to Texas (from Delaware).

BUT, we should not get complacent. Assume this vote is close and encourage everyone you know who is a \$TSLA shareholder to vote. 8 days left.

TSLAQ getting desperate.

If Tesla is a dead company in 3 years, then Elon's comp package is worthless and there's no harm voting for it.

Also Nvidia is not distancing from Tesla. That's dumb.

Even Jenson and $NVDA are distancing themselves from $TSLA. Elon ruined the brand and relationships that were needed to excel his plans.

This is why his comp plan isn't deserved and Elon and Robyn have been begging for the vote. Tesla is a dead company in 3 years.

Morgan Stanley's Adam Jonas in new note:

"We think the proposal for Tesla's investment in xAI deserves more attention. Among a range of possibilities, we believe the proposal may be a 'testing of the waters' for further investment/cooperation between Tesla and xAI down the road. Tesla's progress in robotics would benefit from xAI's progress in AGI. Data sharing between the two 'related parties' (bi-directional) may ultimately benefit from closer cooperation over time from a legal perspective. We reiterate our Overweight rating on \$TSLA and note our bull case remains $800."
